

Abstract Of The Disclosure

The invention provides methods for prognosis and diagnosis in human cancer patients comprising detecting in human tumor tissues the infiltration of 5 certain immune cells associated with poor cancer prognosis. The methods are useful for making clinical decisions on cancer treatment, surveillance and surgical intervention.